More Powa to you

PowaKaddy's PK SPORT has significantly raised the bar for user-friendly trolleys

If there is one thing that we all look for in an electric golf trolley, it is ease of use. After all, there's no point in having an all-singing, all-dancing one if we have no idea how to operate the thing.

With that thought no doubt foremost in their minds, PowaKaddy have created the PK SPORT, an electric cart featuring a new handle design and speed control roller.

It may be easy to operate but there is a certain brilliance to the PK SPORT's innovative ergonomic soft grip handle, which features a built-in ambidextrous speed control roller combined with a fully-integrated LCD display screen. There's also a separate Digital Distance Function button that you can access directly.

The frame is strong but light, which means the powerful but whisper-quiet 200-watt motor delivers a faultless performance.

From £429

As well as the standard 18-hole and 36-hole lead acid battery options the new PK SPORT is available with a top of the range, lightweight Lithium battery.

So confident are they with the quality and durability of the cart, PowaKaddy will be offering an extended 2-year warranty period to those who purchase it.

Simon Homer, PowaKaddy sales and marketing director, on the PK SPORT: "We challenged our designers to come up with

NEW GEAR

NEW SKYCADDIE GPS

Battery-life monitor

Takes away all of the guesswork involved when thinking of whether or not to top up your battery.

GPS systems don't come any better

All hail SkyCaddie SGX

If you like to have lots of information at your fingertips out on the course, take a closer look at the SkyCaddie SGX, a rangefinder that's simply packed with technology.

On the outside, it features a durable, sleek design that incorporates a large three-inch transreflective LCD screen that's easy to read in the brightest sunshine.

It also keeps going for up to 14 hours, thanks to the long-lasting rechargeable Lithium-ion battery.

From a technological point of view, the SGX is quite brilliant. It includes SkyCaddie's proprietary TruePoint Precision Positioning Technology, which is not only fast but also returns reliable results.

HoleVue, meantime, allows you to find out the distance to any point on a hole, so you know just which shot is going to work, while IntelliGreen allows you to see the exact challenge ahead by rotating the green to match your angle of approach.

There is also the Digital Scorecard and Statistic Tracking option to let you know how you are performing in areas like greens in regulation and driving accuracy, which you can then sync and store within SkyCaddie's new online community Club SG Beta. Through this additional component, you can also track key stats, learn about courses and equipment, find a teacher and connect with other golfers.

As it's a SkyCaddie product, the SGX offers up to 30,000 pre-loaded, ground-verified maps. In fact, every course in SkyCaddie's library has been mapped on the ground to make sure the information you receive is flawless.

Such is the storage capacity of the SGX, you can also maintain up to 50 full-featured courses at one time.
